SUMMARY

Jerome is struggling with the long-term sustainability of his Philosophy major and uncertainty about his graduation path, leading to anxiety and uncertainty around his academic and career goals.

KEY CONCERNS

- Deepening into Philosophy without advancing, leading to uncertainty about career path
- Interest in non-traditional career paths (e.g. Business, social impact, philosophy), but lack of guidance
- Lack of grad school preparation, leading to imposter syndrome and uncertainty about grades
- Working on multiple majors without a clear plan, making it hard to find a job

KEY INTERESTS

- Philosophy, academic performance, non-traditional career paths
- Graduate school preparation, imposter syndrome
- Career in Philosophy, multiple majors, uncertainty
- Recommendations for graduate school or non-Philosophy-related jobs

ACTION PLAN

- Schedule a meeting with a graduate advising center to review grad plan and Philosophy courses
- Refer Jerome to career services for non-Philosophy-related jobs (e.g. Data science, social impact, tech)
- Discuss potential minors (e.g. Psychology, English, data science) in the future
- Encourage journaling and reflection on long-term goals and how Philosophy fits
