SUMMARY

Maurice is a first-year student struggling with historical coursework, but not sure how to engage meaningfully with history.

KEY CONCERNS

- First-year student, struggling to understand historical events and their significance
- Need for guidance on historical topics (World War II, Civil Rights, fascism)
- Lack of understanding about academic approach to historical studies
- Difficulty applying what he's learned to real-world issues

ACTION PLAN

- Help Maurice understand the academic framework for studying historical events and how they relate to current events
- Suggest engaging with historical topics through readings, discussions with peers, and assignments that connect to real-world issues
- Use a variety of teaching methods, including historical maps, podcasts, and real-time historical events
- Encourage Maurice to join a historical society or student group to connect with like-minded students

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Schedule a check-in later this semester to assess how Maurice is integrating history into his academic work
- Offer to meet again after a midterm or final exam to review his historical understanding
- Recommend attending a seminar or discussion group led by a history professor
