SUMMARY

Michelle is concerned about academic stability and potential loss of interest in history major due to poor performance in a critical course.

KEY CONCERNS

- Struggling with academic performance in history of Europe course
- Regret about major and potential career implications
- Diffusion about potential career options in international relations and history
- Need for interdisciplinary exploration and academic support in history and international studies

ACTION PLAN

- Refer Michelle to the HUMN 100/HIST 200 seminar series for in-depth exploration of history and history of Europe, including international perspectives
- Connect Michelle with student-led international studies clubs and academic advisors
- Encourage exploration of interdisciplinary fields within history, such as history and literature, or history and social sciences
- Recommend attendance at at least two academic events per semester to build connections and learn from peers

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Schedule a follow-up meeting to review academic progress mid-semester
- Offer support for a major review form through advising portal
- Encourage submission of a minor petition if academic stability is at risk
