SUMMARY

John is experiencing academic and social adjustment concerns in his first year, despite taking several major-specific courses.

KEY CONCERNS

- First-year overload, feeling unprepared for sociology and anthropology content
- Isolation in social sciences department, lack of friends or peers
- Uncertainty about fit and performance in program
- Feeling inadequate on first-year academic path

ACTION PLAN

- Recommend scheduling adjustment session to review course outline and learning outcomes
- Connect John with first-year social science and engagement center
- Suggest joining social science club or peer group through student affairs
- Encourage self-reflection and brainstorming strategies for academic and personal integration

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Check in again after first-year seminar assignments are out
- Offer follow-up session on academic adjustment or major integration
- Refer John to academic advising after major switch or major-specific courses
- Help John explore career pathways in social sciences or interdisciplinary fields
