SUMMARY

Henry is deeply invested in his social science coursework, leading to uncertainty about career paths and potential impact after graduation.

KEY CONCERNS

- Consistently thinking about social justice issues and how to address them
- Worries about finding a social work or academia job right after graduation
- Feeling invested in social science as a career path, despite lack of clarity
- Uncertainty about aligning his values and skills with meaningful career options

ACTION PLAN

- Help Henry explore potential career paths in social services, such as community organizing or casework
- Discuss the social science curriculum's potential for social impact and job-ready skills
- Recommend meeting with a career counselor to discuss multiple career paths within social work and academia
- Encourage reflection on values and skills that align with a social justice lens and potential job responsibilities

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Schedule a follow-up meeting to review graduate school options and career pathways in the next year
- Suggest attending career fairs or networking events focused on social justice or social work
- Offer support for writing a personal statement or resume that aligns with social science values and skills
