SUMMARY

Kimberly is experiencing first-year anxiety and academic pressure due to her music and research-oriented coursework.

KEY CONCERNS

- Extensive academic pressure from music major and honors requirements
- First-year stress from taking music courses and performing well in classes
- Uncertainty about academic performance and future music career
- Feeling overwhelmed by research and academic demands in music and non-music majors

ACTION PLAN

- Help Kimberly identify academic expectations and stressors through first-year seminar assignments
- Introduce first-year seminar on music and academic topics for all students
- Recommend research-oriented coursework as a way to manage stress and career goals
- Connect Kimberly with advising office for academic coaching and stress management strategies

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Schedule a check-in next semester to assess academic stress level and career goals
- Offer support for research projects and graduation planning
- Refer Kimberly to mental health resources if stress continues
