SUMMARY

Robert is struggling with academic performance, uncertainty about career path in geography, and interest in environmental studies and sustainability.

KEY CONCERNS

- Low grades in major courses (including geology, anthropology, and GIS)
- Interest in environmental studies and career paths in sustainability and land use planning
- Inability to identify appropriate coursework based on undergraduate performance
- Lack of support for academic transitions in a humanities-based institution

ACTION PLAN

- Help Robert identify which upper-level geography and environmental courses are struggling, and provide academic coaching on grades and course re-alignment options
- Connect Robert with campus sustainability and environmental studies programs, and provide referral to academic coaching or transfer counseling
- Offer advising sessions on geography major to environmental studies or sustainability fields, or explore joint majors like environmental and earth sciences
- Encourage Robert to continue to engage with the humanities and social sciences in his academic journey

FOLLOW UP PLAN

- Schedule a follow-up meeting to review grades and coaching progress, consider whether to declare a new major or minor
- Offer support for a transfer to a sustainability-focused graduate program or employment in the field
- Recommend Robert explore internships or fellowships in environmental or sustainability fields
